MORE THAN A CENTURY OF SERVICE TO AMERICAN SCHOLARSHIP

The W.F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research in Jerusalem is the oldest American research center for Ancient Near Eastern Studies in the Middle East. Founded in 1900 as the American School of Oriental Research (ASOR), it was renamed in 1970 after its most distinguished director, William Foxwell Albright. Today, the Albright is one of three separately incorporated institutes affiliated with ASOR, the others being in Amman and Nicosia. The present Albright facility was constructed in 1925, with additions made in 1930 and major renovations completed in 1985. Located 500 meters north of the old walled city of Jerusalem, it is within easy walking distance of the Ecole Biblique, the British, German and Spanish Schools of Archaeology, the Institute of Islamic Archaeology, the Hebrew Union College-Nelson Glueck School of Biblical Archaeology, the Hebrew University, the Rockefeller Museum and the Israel Antiquities Authority. This grouping of scholarly resources is one of the heaviest concentrations of human, bibliographic and artifact resources in Ancient Near Eastern Studies.

For the past 102 years, Albright/ASOR has provided students and scholars with an unparalleled international cultural environment and a unique program which spans the broad spectrum of Ancient Near Eastern Studies. Each year, Albright Fellows, primarily from the United States, Canada, Europe, Israel and the Palestinian Entity, exchange information and ideas with hundreds of other and foreign local researchers, including those from other countries of the eastern Mediterranean basin. Dedicated to the advancement of the study of the literature, history and culture of the ancient Near East, including the disciplines of the Archaeology of Palestine and Biblical Studies, the Albright continues to be a major research center and to strive for excellence in scholarship.

Now, as in the past, the Albright Institute provides a wide range of programs and facilities for pre-doctoral and post-doctoral research, as well as an information-sharing program and field work experience, for more than 3,000 persons. These include an annual series of lectures, reports, seminars, workshops, field trips, social events, and support for 24 ASOR-affiliated and Albright-assisted excavation and publications projects. It also includes a publications program, an extensive research library, workshops and living accommodations. The Albright Institute jointly sponsors with the Institute of Archaeology of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem the long-term Tel Miqne-Ekron excavation and publications project.
